Reading websites

If your child likes a certain type of book or if they struggle to find the next fabulous book to read, then the following websites could be a godsend to you.

<https://www.thereaderteacher.com> is a wonderful website where you can find best reads, reviews, and recommendations of children's books to browse. It also has a fantastic book match section where if your child has a favourite author, it will give you recommendations of books in a similar vein that your child would like- it's genius! The website also gives year group and key stage specific book lists.

<https://www.lovereadings4kids.co.uk> is another great website where you can search for books by age or subject. So, if your child loves books about pirates it would bring up a huge list of books (both fiction and non-fiction) on the subject.

Both websites are well worth a look.

First contact at school

Your child's class teacher is the person at school who knows them best. This is why, if you feel you need to speak to someone at school, regarding anything about your child from friendship issues, to struggling with work or SEN matters, your child's teacher should always be the first port of call. If you need to contact your class teacher, please send a message giving an outline of the issue via Studybugs. This will then be given to the class teacher who will then be in touch with you. Thank you.
